Seaside Cottages

Just 90 minutes drive from Cape Town lies Paternoster, a scenic old fishing village on the Cape West Coast. Framed by indigenous fynbos, unspoilt white sandy beaches and rocky outcrops hugging the Atlantic Ocean, Paternoster's charm is reflected in its quaint blue-shuttered Greek-style whitewashed houses, the tinkling of boat masts in the breeze and brightly coloured fishing vessels scattered along the shore.

Not only is Paternoster one of the oldest fishing villages in South Africa, but it is also home to a host of creative talent, with many local artists living and working here to display their sculpture, painting, photography and pottery in various village shops and galleries. In addition, people come here to experience West Coast character and its unpretentious Paternoster people, known for their hospitality, humour and fervent passion for the sea.

Most people who visit the peaceful village simply want to escape the bussle of city life and practise the art of doing as little as possible. For these jaded city dwellers and travellers looking for a luxurious self-catering getaway, the two "Seaside" units offer the perfect seaside escape.
